

InsightOut

Enneagram Assessment

PREPARED FOR

Anders Wennerstrom

Type 9 — The Peacemaker · August 2026

WHAT'S IN THIS REPORT

PREPARED FOR

Anders Wennerstrom

Type 9 — The Peacemaker · SX9 · August 2026

|    |                                                                                                    |    |
|----|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| 01 | Welcome                                                                                     | 1  |
|    | What this report is, how to use it, and what to bring to your debrief.                      |    |
| 02 | What Is the Enneagram?                                                                      | 2  |
|    | A brief introduction to the system: nine types, one dynamic map.                            |    |
| 03 | Quick Reference                                                                             | 3  |
|    | Your assessment results at a glance, and tips for your debrief conversation.                |    |
| 04 | Exploring Your Type Hypothesis                                                              | 4  |
|    | Your leading type, its core motivation, and how the pattern shows up in the real world.     |    |
| 05 | Your Wings                                                                                  | 6  |
|    | The two adjacent types that flavor your Nine, and what each one offers you.                 |    |
| 06 | Your Stress and Security Points                                                             | 7  |
|    | Where you move under pressure and in flow, and how to draw on both.                         |    |
| 07 | Instincts &amp; Subtypes                                                                    | 8  |
|    | Your dominant instinct, your instincts priority, and what it means to be a One-to-One Nine. |    |
| 08 | Development Ideas for Peacemakers                                                           | 9  |
|    | Practical ways to build courage, agility, and resilience, starting today.                   |    |
| 09 | Your Thoughts                                                                               | 10 |
|    | A closing note, questions to sit with, and what to expect in your debrief conversation.     |    |

A NOTE FROM CAI &amp; MO

Welcome, Anders!

You just did something most people never do.

You took the time to look inward. That's not a small thing. Whether you're here because a coach recommended this, a colleague forwarded it, or you simply got curious, we're glad you showed up.

What you're holding is a hypothesis about your personality: a map of what drives you, how you see the world, and why you do the things you do. It's built from how you responded to the InsightOut Assessment, and it's designed to be a starting point, not a final word.

This report is organized as a journey. First a quick summary of your results, then a brief introduction to the Enneagram system itself, then a deep dive into the pattern your responses point to most strongly.

There's no perfect outcome here. The goal isn't to be "typed correctly." It's to see yourself a little more clearly, and to have a richer conversation with whoever helps you go deeper.

We hope it lands.

Cai Delumpa

Co-Founder, Hive, Inc.
Type 7 · The Enthusiast

Monique Breault

Co-Founder, Hive, Inc.
Type 9 · The Peacemaker

What Is the Enneagram?

The Enneagram is a dynamic system that describes nine distinct ways of being in the world: nine strategies, shaped early in life, for how to get love, belonging, and control. Each type is anchored by a core worldview and a deep, core motivation that drives how we think, feel, and behave.

Understanding our type is about seeing the pattern clearly enough that we have a choice about it. Below is an introduction to the nine types and their core motivation, along with the gifts each one offers.

THE NINE ENNEAGRAM TYPES — SCAN EACH ONE

As you read, notice which descriptions pull at you, even slightly. That is the Enneagram beginning to work.

TYPE 1

The Improver

Sees a world that falls short of what it could be. Motivated to be good, principled, and beyond criticism. Attention goes to what is wrong or broken.

Gifts: Integrity, discernment, high standards

TYPE 2

The Giver

Sees a world where love is earned through service. Motivated to be needed and seen as caring. Attention goes to others' needs and relationship dynamics.

Gifts: Warmth, attunement, deep care

TYPE 3

The Performer

Sees a world that rewards results. Motivated to achieve and be recognized as valuable. Attention goes to goals, image, and how others perceive them.

Gifts: Drive, adaptability, inspiring

TYPE 4

The Individualist

Sees a world of infinite depth, with something always missing. Motivated to be authentic and deeply known. Attention goes to what is absent or lacking.

Gifts: Depth, originality, emotional honesty

TYPE 5

The Observer

Sees a world that is overwhelming and intrusive. Motivated to be competent and self-sufficient. Attention goes to ideas, concepts, and conserving energy.

Gifts: Clarity, insight, objectivity

TYPE 6

The Questioner

Sees a world that is unpredictable and unsafe. Motivated by security, trust, and preparedness. Attention goes to potential threats and who can be counted on.

Gifts: Loyalty, foresight, fierce commitment

TYPE 7

The Enthusiast

Sees a world full of possibility, threatened by limitation and pain. Motivated to stay free and experience life fully. Attention goes to options and what is next.

Gifts: Possibility, joy, generative energy

TYPE 8

The Protector

Sees a world where only the strong protect the weak. Motivated to assert strength and guard against injustice. Attention goes to power dynamics and who needs protecting.

Gifts: Strength, advocacy, courage

TYPE 9

The Peacemaker

Sees a world with underlying unity that conflict threatens. Motivated to maintain harmony and avoid disconnection. Attention goes to others' perspectives and common ground.

Gifts: Inclusion, steadiness, presence

Each of us has access to all nine Enneagram types, and one of them is your home base. Keep reading to find out which type your responses pointed to most clearly.

YOUR REPORT AT A GLANCE

Quick Reference

A single-page summary of your assessment results. You'll find a more detailed description of your leading type hypothesis and its dynamics on the following pages.

How the Nine Patterns Scored

Type 9 is your leading hypothesis. Type 5 scored close behind and is worth exploring with your coach, particularly if parts of the Nine description do not quite fit.

YOUR SUBTYPE (PRIMARY TYPE + PRIMARY INSTINCT)

The One-to-One Nine

The Seeker · Merging & Intensity

Peace is achieved through deep, intense connection with a partner, a practice, or a cause you care about.

Tips for Debriefing This Report with Your Coach

- Bring what didn't land. The parts that felt wrong are as useful to your coach as the parts that felt true.
- Come with examples, not conclusions. A recent situation you can describe is worth more than a verdict.
- Ask about the alternate. If a second pattern scored close, that is a conversation, not a loose end.
- Pick one thing to work on. You do not need to act on all of it. One growing edge is enough to start.

EXPLORING YOUR TYPE HYPOTHESIS

Type 9 · The Peacemaker

Based on your responses to the questionnaire, we're presenting you with Type 9 - The Peacemaker as the strongest hypothesis of your home base Enneagram type. We encourage you to hold this as a hypothesis until you've read through this report and/or have discussed it with your coach. Remember, you are the ultimate authority on your Enneagram type.

9

Core Motivation

To maintain inner and outer peace, stay connected to others, and avoid the conflict and discomfort that come with asserting your own priorities.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                              |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| WORLDVIEW The world has an underlying unity that conflict threatens. Your role is to maintain harmony and find common ground.                                                                                                                                                                   | CORE BELIEF Keeping the peace keeps you connected. Asserting yourself risks the harmony you depend on. |
| IN YOUR OWN WORDS "I project a calm presence and this helps others regulate and calm themselves as well. It can be a powerful antidote to fear, anxiety, and other emotions that disrupt connection... I overthink things at times, perhaps often. This slows me down and leads to indecision." |                                                                                                                              |

| THE PEACEMAKER AT A GLANCE       |                                                                                                |                          |                                                                                              |
|----------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| WHAT NINES WANT                  | To have inner and outer peace, and to experience a sense of belonging                          | WHAT NINES TEND TO AVOID | Conflict, discomfort, and feeling disregarded or disconnected                                |
| WHERE NINES TURN THEIR ATTENTION | The environment around them, potential conflict, and other people's agendas and claims on them | DRIVING EMOTION          | Anger. Though present, anger goes unacknowledged in order to preserve inner and outer peace. |

Typical Patterns of the Type 9 Peacemaker

1

THINKING

As a Peacemaker, your attention goes outward to everyone else's positions, agendas, and comfort, often more readily than to your own. Locating your own stance is the harder task.

2

FEELING

As a Peacemaker, you carry a steady, even temperament, but that calm can sit on top of feelings smoothed over rather than fully felt. Anger, in particular, goes quiet first.

3

BEHAVING

As a Peacemaker, your behavior organizes around not making waves: going along, smoothing things over, keeping everyone comfortable. Your steadiness is a gift, and sometimes a hiding place.

EXPLORING YOUR TYPE HYPOTHESIS (CONTINUED)

The Type 9 Peacemaker patterns described on the previous page usually run in the background, like an "internal operating system". The real power of the Enneagram is learning how to expand beyond our default patterns. The first step is seeing how our patterns show up in the real world. Here are some things to look for.

AT YOUR BEST

- Steady warmth. A receptive presence that makes people feel genuinely welcome.
- Holding multiple perspectives. Non-judgmental and inclusive, making you a trusted mediator.
- Steady presence. A calm, stabilizing force that becomes real strength when embodied.

YOUR GROWING EDGE

- Self-forgetting. You may manage everyone else's comfort while quietly losing track of your own.
- Merging. Agreeableness, repeated over time, can make you forget your own agenda.
- Quiet anger. Unacknowledged, it turns into inertia or passive resistance.

Communication, Conflict, and Decision-Making Styles

COMMUNICATION STYLE

Inclusive and Indirect

- You listen more than you assert. People rarely leave knowing what you actually think.
- Your real position forms later, in private. In the moment, you may not know it.
- Maybe, perhaps, I don't mind. Qualifiers take the edges off your point.

CONFLICT STYLE

Go Along to Get Along

- You find the reading where everyone is fine. What you reframe returns larger.
- Discomfort gets smoothed, not named. Relief now, a vague heaviness later.
- When pushed, you may dig in, become stubborn, and slow down the pace.

DECISION-MAKING STYLE

Every Option Counts

- Every choice has a case, so deciding feels like discarding rather than gaining.
- Your own preference surfaces last. Choosing on the spot is hard.
- Knowing what you don't want comes first. That is a usable starting point.

Catching Your Patterns in the Moment

SIGNS THE PATTERN IS SHOWING UP

- You say "yes" when you want to say "no".
- You withhold your opinion to not rock the boat.
- You ignore the tension in your body.

INTERRUPTING THE PATTERN

- Make a counteroffer instead of a flat-out "no".
- Speak your truth with no attachments.
- Pause, breathe, and be curious about the tension.

NAVIGATING THE ENNEAGRAM SYSTEM

Your Wings

Wings are the two types immediately adjacent to your home base type. Each wing "flavors" how your type shows up, and most people naturally lean more towards one. Both are always present, but which one shows up more is unique to you. When you access your wings intentionally they become valuable resources for balancing the automatic patterns of your home base type.

8 WING · TYPE 8

The Protector

A Nine with a strong Eight wing carries more edge, more appetite, and more willingness to push back when pushed. The Eight wing brings access to anger as a useful signal rather than something to manage away.

- You carry real presence, and you will protect others more readily than yourself.
- You can be direct, and you will confront something that matters to you.
- Once you know where you stand, you act on it.
- Others may find you more grounded and forceful than your easygoing manner suggests.
- Left unexamined, irritation can arrive suddenly and then vanish back into accommodation.

AS A RESOURCE

When you need to hold a position, take up space, or act decisively, reach for the Eight wing. It turns the Peacemaker's steadiness into something with backbone.

1 WING · TYPE 1

The Improver

A Nine with a stronger One wing carries more structure, more attention to doing things properly, and more internal discipline. The One wing brings a sense that things should be a certain way.

- You follow through on things, where Nine energy on its own might drift.
- You hold standards and want things done right.
- You bring care and craft to what you take on.
- Others may find you more orderly and idealistic than they expect of a Nine.
- Left unchecked, quiet perfectionism can turn self-forgetting into self-judgment.

AS A RESOURCE

When you need focus, standards, or the discipline to finish something important, reach for the One wing. It channels the Peacemaker's acceptance into something more purposeful.

NAVIGATING THE ENNEAGRAM SYSTEM

Your Stress and Security Points

The Enneagram system shows you where you tend to move when you're feeling secure and in flow, and where you tend to move under an unusual amount of stress. Both moves happen in the background, part of the same internal operating system as your Home Base type and your Wings. When you access these points intentionally they become valuable resources to expand your range of choices in any situation.

6

STRESS POINT · TYPE 6

The Questioner

When pressure builds past what steady acceptance can absorb, Nines move toward Type 6. You may show either the strengths or the challenges of the Questioner, depending on the circumstances.

- The easy calm gives way to anxiety, doubt, and worst-case thinking.
- Noticed early, the movement signals that something important has been pushed down.
- The same line carries you toward Six when you are mobilizing for action, not only when strained.

ACCESSING THE HIGH SIDE OF TYPE 6

Useful vigilance, loyalty, and the commitment to face what matters rather than smooth it over.

3

SECURITY POINT · TYPE 3

The Performer

When Nines feel genuinely safe and supported, they move toward Type 3. Here too you may show either the strengths or the challenges of the Performer, depending on the circumstances.

- The diffusion gives way to direction, focus, and energy.
- Priorities come into focus and get pursued, without waiting for someone else to set the agenda.
- The movement can also arrive paradoxically, when you are overwhelmed or exhausted rather than settled.

ACCESSING THE HIGH SIDE OF TYPE 3

Stepping into your own goals rather than deferring. Letting yourself want something and moving toward it.

Putting Your Resources to Work

These movements are easier to work with once you can see them happening. The skill is catching yourself in the moment, and it builds with practice.

CATCH THE SHIFT

Notice the moment the easy calm turns to worry, or the diffusion turns to drive. Early is better than accurate.

NOTICE THE IMPACT

Ask what the people around you are experiencing while you are in that energy. The shift lands on them too.

THEN CHOOSE

Seen clearly, the movement becomes something you use on purpose rather than something that happens to you.

NAVIGATING THE ENNEAGRAM SYSTEM

Instincts &amp; Subtypes

Alongside your home base type, you have a dominant instinct, one of three innate drives that shape where you put your energy. We use all three instincts but one tends to dominate. Your subtype combines your core type with your dominant instinct, creating a distinct flavor of the Peacemaker pattern.

The Three Instincts

| SP Self-Preservation                                                                                                                                  | SO Social                                                                                                                                                      | SX One-to-One                                                                                                                                            |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| FOCUSED ON Safety, comfort, health, and the practical resources of daily life: securing what you need physically and materially. | FOCUSED ON Belonging, group dynamics, and your place within a community: alliances, fairness, collective causes, knowing where you stand. | FOCUSED ON Deep, intense connection with specific people or experiences: chemistry, magnetism, and the quality of individual bonds. |

YOUR SUBTYPE

The One-to-One Nine

The Seeker · Merging & Intensity

| SP9The CollectorComfort &amp; Routine                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | SO9The Community BenefactorBelonging &amp; Participation                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | SX9The SeekerMerging &amp; Intensity                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| SECONDARY                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | TERTIARY                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | PRIMARY                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| WHERE THE ENERGY GOES Into the body and the immediate environment: familiar routines, comfortable spaces, the satisfying accumulation of things that soothe. THE INNER EXPERIENCE Life feels settled and manageable. The avoidance is hard to catch because it registers as contentment. GROWING EDGE Noticing the numbing: the comfortable habits that quietly substitute for what actually matters. | WHERE THE ENERGY GOES Into the group: working hard on its behalf, keeping collective harmony, showing up reliably for others. THE INNER EXPERIENCE Real warmth toward the group, running alongside a quiet question about whether the belonging is real. GROWING EDGE Noticing the gap between outward agreeableness and the inner experience of truly belonging. | WHERE THE ENERGY GOES Into one bond: a partner, a practice, or something larger than yourself. The longing is for fusion. THE INNER EXPERIENCE The bond feels like the most alive thing there is. Everything outside it quietly loses its colour. GROWING EDGE Locating yourself inside the relationship: your own priorities, distinct from the beloved's. |

IN YOUR RESPONSES

Your responses point to the One-to-One instinct as your strongest: energy channeled through depth and focused engagement rather than broad social connection or practical security. It shows in your absorption in yoga and present-moment awareness, and in your journey toward "learning to feel comfortable in a body in front of people."

INSIGHT TO ACTION

Development Ideas for Peacemakers

The Enneagram is a map and compass for developing yourself personally and professionally. Here are some ideas for bringing more courage, agility, and resilience into your life and work that can be applied in any situation.

Courage

Growing your capacity to experience fear, face what you avoid, and move forward anyway.

Peacemakers tend to avoid conflict, disruption, and disconnection. Developing courage means staying with that discomfort and trusting that right action will bring more connection, not less.

- In conversations or meetings, try going first. Trust that your perspective matters just as much as everyone else's and is a gift, not a burden.
- Pay attention to your “urge to merge” when you sense potential conflict. Trust that your relationship will survive moments of disagreement.
- Seek alignment, not simply agreement. Trust that what you hold as important sometimes requires taking a stand. This is where win-win is born.

Agility

Growing your range of choices, especially when situations or circumstances get challenging.

Your Wings (Types 8 and 1), your Stress Point (Type 6), and your Security Point (Type 3) are resources that expand your range of choices in any situation or circumstance.

- Lean into Type 8 when you need to hold your ground or assert your perspective.
- Lean into Type 1 when you need to take a principled stand or stay in integrity with your values.
- Lean into the higher side of Type 6 when you are overly anxious and need to reach out for help.
- Lean into Type 3 when you need to find focus and move into right action.

Resilience

Growing your ability to get back up after a fall, dust yourself off, and keep going.

Getting back up after a fall means feeling all the feels and allowing the experience to teach you something about yourself you can apply next time.

- Self-compassion can be hard for Type 9s. Try talking to yourself like you would to a friend.
- What story are you telling yourself? Ask: Is it true? Is it really true? What if it is not true?
- Remember: you are not alone and you do not have to go through tough times by yourself. Help is a phone call or text away.

The ideas above are a starting point for a deeper exploration on your own or with a coach. Take some time to reflect on where you want to focus and use the next page to capture your thoughts.

QUESTIONS TO EXPLORE

Your Thoughts

Whatever landed as recognition, and whatever made you want to argue with a paragraph or two, is all good data. This report is a hypothesis, not a verdict, and the only way to test it is against your own experience. The questions below are a place to start. If you would like to go further, an InsightOut coach can help you deepen and pressure-test what you have read here.

What's one thing you want to remember from this report?

What's one thing you're still curious about and want to learn more about?

Of the development ideas on the previous page (Courage, Agility, and Resilience), what would create the most leverage for you personally and professionally?

How do you want to use this information going forward?

Any additional insights you want to bring out?